

TARBORO': DECEMBER 4.

Rail Road Accident.

We understand a collision took place on the Wilmington Road a few days since, between a passenger and a freight train. Tho' one of the engines was very greatly damaged, no serious injury resulted to any person, besides one of the engineers, who was badly but not mortally wounded.

In this county, some ten days since a man, named John Ford, was found dead in the road, Cause, liquor. The same spirit, we understand, also effected the foul deed, which we recorded in our last. How long shall our people continue to make that a fashionable and innocent (?) gratification which leads to such consequences?

How is it?

We heard a gentleman a few days since, ordering his cotton to be sent by river, because Freight per bale, had been raised, between Wilmington and New York to $1,50. The Wilmington Herald, we perceive, quotes the same at 75c. a $1. Ye Commission Merchants, look to it.

"Croaker from Conetoe."

This correspondent, whose spicy jottings, our readers usually receive with great relish, we regret to say, has in our judgment committed in his last article quite an error. One, however, for which an excuse may be readily given; as to distinguish between true and false delicacy is a very nice and subtile discrimination. More particularly, when it is conceded, that attendant circumstances, have much to do, in the formation of a correct judgment thereon. Few indeed can give a definition of genuine delicacy satisfactory to themselves. And these few are willing to admit that they would advise a definition varying with the persons to whom it was given. As for instance, if the community were tending rather too much to one extreme, they would be sure to take either a conservative or a converse position.

Permit us to ask then, has Croaker taken such a view, and penned such an article as would be calculated to effect a good purpose in our county? Or has he not rather sacrificed a good resolve, an attempt at enlighten. ment, to his propensity for wit and humor, and by double-meanings and obscene hints, pleasing yet vicious, perpetrated an act much better adapted to a perversion of taste than the very exhibition which he condemns? The loathsome, the ungainly, is not apt to engender indelicate thought, for the mind is unwilling to contemplate it, unless for at least a supposed profit. But the vile yet beautiful, the corrupt yet fancy-pleasing or laughter-provoking is sure to allure from the path of rectitude many of the sons of men. To say the least, Croaker has clearly

"Compounded for sins he was inclined to By damning those he had no mind to."

But we differ yet a little farther. We were pleased at the encouragement our citizens gave the lecturer. We dissented from the delivery, and the illustrations, we by no means disapproved. Does "Croaker" think it indelicate to attend an exhibition of Power's Greek slave? Would he think it improper to place a plaster cast of the same where ladies might see it? Or can he believe that the human form lovely in its perfection, is less apt to engender passionate thoughts than the half-dissected body from which the mind instinctively recoils? The former to the pure, chaste admirer of nature in all her perfectibility and beauty, surely must be an object pleasing to the senses and elevating to the tastes. The latter can never pollute, for its hidcous, seeming deformity neither allures the fancy, excites the passions, nor recurs to our remembrance save thro' necessity. Neither necessarily conduces to impurity of sentiment. but if either certainly the former. The latter it is true leaves an unpleasant sensation; and if seen for no good purpose, had better remain unseen. This friend "Croaker" might properly have advised, had "manifold manikins" been simply on exhibition. But such was not the case. The repulsive features of the exhibition were artfully covered, as with graceful drapery, by strictly chaste, elegantly ornate, and highly instructive lec-

The Legislature.

Dates from Oregon are to the 23d October.—Overland emigrants continue to arrive, nearly all in great distress. Information had been received of 800 or 900 wagons on the way.-Very few of the emigrants had any flour, and were obliged to live upon their own cattle .- The citizens of Oregon City and Milwauke had raised $1000 for their relief.

Presidential Election in Panama.

The Americans who were detained in Panama on the day of the Presidential election in the United States, resolved to go through that interesting ceremony We understand the Free Suffrage bill was among themselves. They were not to ing something to do in making a President. Polls were opened at the office of the American Consul, and at the barroom of the St. Charles Hotel. At the former 329 votes were taken, the voters representing every State in the Union; the result being 27 majority for General Scott. At the latter place there were 227 votes taken, Scott and Graham, 106; Pierce and King, 117, Webster and Jenkins, 3; Hale and Julien, 1. Giving Pierce and King a majority over Scott at the poll, of 11 votes. It is clear, therefore, that Panama has gone for Scott by sixteen votes! thus giving him one more State!

We wait impatiently for all the papers, giving this news. "Scott leads the column," and Panama needs a "Military Asylum. - Cin. Enq.
